HERE AND THERE

Ray Korschach purchased a farm south of Carleton place some months ago and during the past week moved his wife and family to the farm. They have been residents of town for the past several years.

What few Irishmen there are in Gleichen must have forgot to celebrate St. Patrick's Day, consequently it was quiet here. In the old days the Irish always shook the day with a dance.

Gundy a chinook struck the district and brought on a spell of fine weather. Each day since then the snow has been rapidly melting but at night there is heavy frost.

G. T. Jones who has been confined to a Calgary hospital for the past several weeks is reported to be improved in health. Mr. Jones celebrated his 82 birthday. Mr. Jones has been ill for several weeks at his home and is also better.

Don McDonald, Gleichen's touring carter, returned last week from a visit to his old home in Scotland. While on his tour he met Mr. Haskins who is holidaying in England. Don says he enjoyed his holiday and is now busy getting his blacksmith shop ready for the spring rush of business.

The Strathmore minstrels put on their second annual show here Monday evening in the Community Hall before a packed house. They gave a very good performance. Monday, Mrs. the many laughs by the crowd the show was thoroughly enjoyed. The performance was very good. The fall the cast entertained the inmates at Eventide Home. The show here was sponsored by the Gleichen United Church.

St. Andrew's W. A. Gleichen will hold an Easter Tea and sale of home cooking on Saturday, April 8 at 3 p.m. in the Curling Rink.

Already many are making their garden plans for the season and it is hoped Gleichen will have many fine gardens this year.

Level crossings still are taking a toll of highway injuries in Alberta and other provinces. Hardly a week passes but there are reports of fatal accidents of this type. Officials of the Alberta Motor Association have sounded fresh warnings concerning the hazards of level crossings. "Obviously there is need of a fresh educational campaign on this problem," said an official. "Despite the terrible toll in lives annually from crossing accidents, for too many drivers are not exercising proper care. At this time when motor traffic about to increase, it is necessary to urge motorists to be on the alert." Recently it was reported that surveys had been made of the crossings with a view to eliminating as many as possible. Some progress has been made along this line in recent years but there still are thousands of these crossings across the country. Warning signs do not seem to be sufficient, according to motor club officials. There must be fresh effort to bring the need of greater safety to the attention of motorists. "This is a matter being studied by officials in the interests of promoting greater safety on the highways."

Charles Clarin a resident of Gleichen for the past ten years died last week at the age of 80 years. By trade he was a travelling salesman for a musical firm in Toronto. His territory was all across Canada. Gleichen was one of the towns he called at. He was born in Ontario and had been a resident of the province for the past fifty years. Before coming to Gleichen he made his home in Calgary. The funeral took place last Wednesday afternoon when Major Parkinson and Capt. Carmichael of the Salvation Army officiated. Interment was made in Eventide cemetery.

In the days of free trade between town and country, the country was reasonably prosperous in places in which to live and raise a family. In the country, folks were content to work a bit harder and a bit longer to take care of the extra cost of delivering their produce to the markets. In the town manufacturers and merchants knew that rural business was important and their costs would have to be controlled so that country folk could afford to buy in sufficient vol-

GARDEN PEAS FOR EARLY PLANTING

Peas are a favorite vegetable in all gardens. The first objective is to get them producing as early as possible. The earliest varieties are, therefore, given prominence in the variety tests conducted at experimental stations. In addition to the pleasures of having green peas early in the summer, the use of quickly maturing sorts is important in the successful culture of this vegetable on the prairie. Peas grow best in cool damp weather. They produce bigger yields and a finer flavored vegetable under these conditions than if the weather is hot and dry. Accordingly they should be planted early in order to take advantage of the cool temperatures that are most frequent in the spring season. The first seedlings should be made as soon as the garden soil is dry enough to be worked. This may be done as early as April 17. The soil is usually cool at this time of season and seed rotting can occur, if germination does not commence immediately. Treating the seed, prior to planting with Arasan or Spargon, is desirable to check such deterioration.

The Alaska pea is a smooth seeded, old-time standby that is very early and has fair quality. It was thought at one time that smooth-seeded varieties had greater resistance to late spring frosts than the wrinkled-seeded kinds. However, this does not always apply. The Laxali pea has considerable frost resistance and its seed is quite high quality. It is a desirable early and high quality variety. Little Marvel continues as an early favorite. It is a heavy yielder with dwarf plants. The new Arcti Sweet also has dwarf plants and is a wrinkled seeded variety with roots resembling those of Lincoln.

This appears to be a worth while sort. It is a heavy producer and the green peas are excellently flavored. The mainstay variety, a wrinkled seeded variety, is very early but has medium long and willow vines which tend to tangle for home harvesting purposes. It produces green peas of desirable quality.

One of the newest types of early garden peas, a seed of which will soon be placed on the market, is the extreme dwarf or midgait variety

LOCAL CAMPAIGN HEADQUARTERS, GLEICHEN

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

Happy Ending

By Jeanne O. Wennenkamp

IT WOULD take a minor miracle to bring this day to a happy conclusion. Mary Cody, sitting alone, looked at the last of the tomatoes, desert the lunch room after the noon-hour lunch. Her cup had cooled unattended, and she signalled the waitress for another pot of tea.

"So this is it," she thought. "For years you live on schedule. You dash out of the office at twelve-thirty, hurry through lunch, maybe stop for a trifle if you have time, then back to your desk." Her dark head, with its two wings of white at the temples, bent over the replenished cup.

"Then suddenly, without warning, it's all over. You're tired, first. You can sit drinking tea all afternoon . . . or as long as your money lasts. Everybody except you is in a hurry, everybody else in the world is needed somewhere."

She picked up a spoon and stirred listlessly. "What next?" she asked herself. "Where does a middle-aged woman with a sick mother to support look for a job? Not the department stores; they want young girls with trim figures and bright smiles."

Mary looked at the waitress who was briskly clearing the next table. "And not restaurants, vitality is what they demand—and a strong back." She picked up a newspaper and turned to the advertisements. "Help Wanted—Female."

As if set in red type, the words jumped at her: "Girls wanted . . . Young ladies . . . Attractive young woman needed for office work . . . Under 35 . . . Girls . . . Girls . . ."

"Is there no place at all for an older woman?" Mary asked herself. "Just what is one supposed to do? Quietly blow away like a sere and yellow leaf?"

She began, for the first time, to think of women she had seen; all the little, inconspicuous shadows who had fringed her own busy days.

How could one, after years of feeling necessary and important to the welfare of a flourishing business, suddenly join these lost ones, the forgotten women?

And how did one go home and tell?

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out about a pint of bile every day. If it doesn't, you get indigestion, headache, constipation, etc. If this bile is not flowing freely, your liver is not doing its job. It is not doing its job if it is not pouring out about a pint of bile every day. It is not doing its job if it is not pouring out about a pint of bile every day. It is not doing its job if it is not pouring out about a pint of bile every day.

It takes about 100 c.c. of bile to keep the system in good health. If you are not pouring out about a pint of bile every day, you are not doing your job. It is not doing your job if it is not pouring out about a pint of bile every day. It is not doing your job if it is not pouring out about a pint of bile every day.

"Is There No Place At All For An Older Woman?"
By Jeanne O. Wennenkamp

She pictured herself climbing the stairs to the little apartment. The querulous voice of the invalid, so dependent for everything—food, for home, for care, for touch with life.

Could she keep such a secret? Could she, while her small savings lasted, leave in the morning, and while she looked for work, maintain the illusion?

And when the money was gone, what then?

"It's not fair," thought Mary. "The young man who comes calling, he's all you ever dreamed of, but he can't take on the support of your aging mother. So you ask him to wait. But the money slip by, and your salary barely covers expenses. The doctor's bills keep piling up. There's never anything to save toward that rainy future."

The young man is patient, but gradually stops calling so frequently. Apologetically, then defensively, he makes excuses. Finally both the excuses and the calls stop.

Well, you're still young. There'll be other young men . . . and in the meantime, there's the job and mother. Guess you're pretty lucky to be needed. Plenty of time for marriage and children . . . plenty of time . . .

The tea room was empty now, except for the waitress, eyeing Mary. As if child fingers had touched her, she pulled her coat over her shoulders, and fumbled in her bag for a few coins. She placed them on the table, and pushed back her chair and left. She almost ran into an office building across the street.

The elevator operator said, "You're late from lunch, eh, Miss Cody?" and whisked her to the sixth floor.

Mary Cody entered the office. Without removing her coat, she called, "May I see you a moment, Miss Simpson?"

A woman whose red-rimmed eyes were attempting to focus on a stack of record cards, looked up.

"Yes, Miss Cody," she replied in a small voice, and the two stepped into a glass-walled office.

"Miss Simpson," said Mary Cody, "I want you to forget what I said this morning. We need you here very much."

"Oh, Miss Cody, you mean I'm not fired?"

"As long as you want to."

"Miss Cody, I'll be more careful. I may make mistakes, you'll see. I've just had so much on my mind . . . my mother, you know." She brushed a tear away.

"Yes, Miss Cody," she replied in a small voice, and the two stepped into a glass-walled office.

Mary Cody smiled as she hung her coat in the office whose door read "President."

"I think I know just what it means," she said.

Scheme Was Successful

Bert Karls, Bay Trail, Sask., and his brother decided to cerease the barley last spring and had great success. They bought machinery to mill the grain, but were not satisfied with the result, so they decided to mill the grain in the mill. This is shown in the picture. The grain is dumped into the mill, cereased, and then shelled into fine grain. Picture was taken when northeast wind was blowing so they didn't have to bother with manes.

Statistics Show Farm Wages Down

OTTAWA.—A downward trend in farm wages was noted by the bureau of statistics.

Farm workers were getting an average of $3.63 a day plus board in January, a drop of 41 cents from the 1949 average of $4.04.

Without board, the average daily rate was reported at $4.52, down 45 cents from last year's $4.97.

SCENIC BEAUTY

Urge Manitobans To Tour Province

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man.—Contradicting the assumption of some "plain-dwellers" that Manitoba was necessarily flat and uninteresting, Judge S. H. Fabrigar, guest speaker at a dinner at the Hotel Lion's club, urged his listeners to make a tour of the province and become acquainted with its geographic and geographical features. He felt that, having done so they would be more inclined than ever to become lovers of their own province. They would be charmed with the variety of scenery and way of living that existed here and they would thus become aware of their responsibility in keeping and preserving Manitoba.

The future of Manitoba, of this community, indeed of the country, depends on you. See that you do something about it," he concluded.

SEEDTIME and HARVEST

By F. J. GRENEY, District of Agriculture, Western Canada, Ottawa, Ontario.

The Grasshopper Menace of 1950
The reliable grasshopper surveys made by entomologists of the Dominion Department of Agriculture indicate that one of the worst grasshopper invasions since the 1930's may occur in Western Canada in 1950.

Cultural Methods Important—Owing to the fact that there are very heavy infestations of grasshoppers on stubble fields throughout Western Canada this year, the value of proper cultural methods cannot be over-emphasized. First of all, heavily infested stubble fields should not be sown to grain in 1950. They should be summer-fallowed. Early surface cultivation after the first infested crop land is strongly recommended. Early seeding is also advisable. Guard and trap strips should be used on all summerfallow land. These should be treated early and frequently with poison bait or sprayed or dusted with such chemicals as Chloridan, Aldrin or Toxaphene. Because of the outstanding results obtained during 1949, Chloridan and other new chemical sprays and dusts will be widely used in 1950. It must be remembered, however, that the first line of defence in any successful grasshopper control program is the use of efficient cultural practices. Community Action Method—In 1950, grasshopper control, regardless of the cultural and chemical methods used, will be most effective if all provincial and municipal officials, farmers, grain buyers and others co-operate in destroying threatening infestations of grasshoppers wherever they are found. The first responsibility of farmer, however, is to keep the grasshoppers on their own farms strictly under control. No effort must be spared in confining these winged pests to non-cropped land and from spreading to grain crops.

Consult your local Agricultural Representative, Municipal Grasshopper Supervisor, or nearest Dominion Entomological Laboratory for more detailed information on the latest and best grasshopper control measures.

BUTTER MAKES IT BETTER

For centuries the incomparable flavor of butter has appealed to people throughout the world. In Canada the making of butter in the home was a part of pioneer life. The commercial manufacture of butter has been established for a great many years and produces a more uniform product. Today we have more than a thousand creameries producing about three hundred million pounds of butter each year.

Rationing of butter during the war years taught us to spread the bread a little more thinly and to do without that delicious little pat of butter in the baked potato or on other cooked vegetables. Habits are easily formed whether good or bad, but many of us are still foregoing a flavor treat as well as a good nutritional benefit by continuing the habit of going easy on the butter.

No matter how good butter may be when purchased, care must be taken to retain its sweet flavor. It should always be stored in a cool, dry place, away from all foods which have a distinct odor or flavor, as it readily absorbs foreign flavors. It should be kept in a covered container or well wrapped in the parchment paper in which it is purchased.

Butter is so smooth and flavorful that it makes an excellent spread for bread or toast and it adds extra goodness to cookies, cakes, deserts, candies and sauces. The names Butter, Scotch or Buttercup, when used in any of these products bring to mind mouth watering suggestions of flavor and texture.

Nothing beats a topping of crunchy butter crumbs on a casserole dish. Often such a topping makes the family forget that they are eating leftovers.

Another idea for topping is used on biscuits. Use your favorite recipe for baking powder biscuits but substitute half cup cornmeal for half cup of flour. When the dough is rolled and cut, dip the tops of the biscuits in melted butter, then in cornmeal. Bake in a hot oven and serve with butter and maple syrup, honey or jam.

APPLE BUTTERSCOTCH SAUCE
Half cup butter; three quarter cup brown sugar; 3 tablespoons cornstarch; pinch of salt; 2 1/2 cups apple juice; 20 cc. can. Malt butter. Blend in sugar, cornstarch and salt. Cook until mixture is slightly thickened. Add apple juice and cook, stirring constantly, until sauce thickens. Continue cooking for 5 minutes. Serve with steamed fruit pudding or hot ginger bread.
